Universities are not the only organizations which begin their years as the leaves are turning. That is also when the Supreme Court begins its new term. So the "Friday Lunch" begins each Fall semester with a review of the Court's past term and preview of the next. The 2018-19 term included the Court's seemingly final decision to ignore partisan redistricting, in Rucho v. Common Cause, and rejection of a census citizenship question in Department of Commerce v. New York. There were a series of federalism and death penalty cases, and in Gundy v. United States the Court did little but four justices seemed to support a revolution in Administrative Law. Perhaps most interesting, one analysis showed that Justices Gorsuch and Kavanaugh disagreed unusually often for two appointees of the same president.

The new term may have more explosive social issues, including at least two on LGBT status; one on the Trump administration's rollback of DACA, and perhaps a big challenge to the Affordable Care Act. Join us as CWRU's experts discuss what happened and what might happen.

The Friday Public Affairs Discussion Lunch is an opportunity for students, faculty, staff, emeriti and other members of our communities to learn and question each other about public policy issues at the international, national, and local levels. Faculty and other speakers share their research and experience to get beyond the headlines and repetition in the mass media, and the wild rumors of the internet. Lunch is brown bag, but cookies and some beverages are provided by the Center for Policy Studies of the College of Arts and Sciences.
