A Global Leadership Conversation

Singapore 15 - 17 November 2015
Welcome to Singapore in 2015, the year of its 50th anniversary since independence.

In his famous medieval poem, Yehuda Halevi wrote: “My heart is in the East, and I am at the edge of the West.” Halevi lived in 12th century Spain, and looking East meant looking across the Mediterranean to Eretz Yisrael. Updating the poem for today, and taking some poetic licence, we could say: “Israel is at the edge of the West, but its future is in the East.”

Or as The Economist (18/7) put it earlier this year, “Israel is pivoting to Asia.” True, that’s not exactly breaking news. The shift has been underway for a few years. And it was at least part of the impetus for holding the first Jewish Funders Network/Australian Jewish Funders conference in Hong Kong last year. But the shift is gathering speed even as we meet. China, India, and Japan, to cite only Asia’s Big Three, are pulling Israel in their direction, and Israel is seizing the opportunities. Nor is it just about trade and the Start-Up Nation.

But in this historic and strategic realignment, Israel is way ahead of the Jewish world which, on Asia, hasn’t caught up with the 21st century. So we hope this second conference, which aims to look at this gap through the lens of global Jewish philanthropy, is a small contribution to some “consciousness raising”.

Which is why the Pratt Foundation is delighted, once again, to support the JFN and AJF, who have convened this year’s conference in partnership with the Jewish Welfare Board Singapore and the Jewish Business Forum.

We are grateful to all who’ve helped to bring us together, and delighted to be working with Singapore’s Jewish community.

But a special thanks to the AJF’s tireless CEO, Tracie Olcha, whose vision, creativity, and leadership have made things happen, and to JFN President, Andres Spokoiny who, from the very beginning, has embraced the imperative for Jewish leadership “to look East” and whose experience and wisdom was critical for the development of this program.

10:30am  Morning Break

10:45am  Session 2

COMMUNITY CHALLENGES, PHILANTHROPIC OPPORTUNITIES AND IDEAS

Despite the geographic and cultural differences, most Jewish communities around the world share similar challenges. We will explore how communities can collaborate tackling two such challenges:

(a) Engagement in Jewish Life - As a people, our future depends on our ability to inspire generation after generation to engage in Jewish life, and to devote their time and talent to strengthening the Jewish community. In this session we will explore the global challenges and inspiring tales of innovative methods of Jewish engagement, and look at how together, we can strengthen ties to Jewish identity and Jewish life. Discussion topics will include young adult engagement and affordability and sustainability of Jewish Day Schools.
BDS - the global movement to condemn Israel and produce boycotts, sanctions and divestments is growing dangerously across the world. How is this issue affecting Israel and diaspora Jews? What can we do to counteract it? Having leaders from different communities gives us an opportunity to discuss and share ideas on possible common action and how the relationship with Asia may be used to counter this threat.

Conversation facilitated by Robert Dorfman - Chair Herald Holdings Ltd, Andres Spokoiny, President and CEO Jewish Funders Network and Tracie Olcha - CEO Australian Jewish Funders

Tracie Olcha

Australia

Tracie Olcha is CEO at the Australian Jewish Funders (AJF). Since joining the AJF in early 2011, Tracie together with the Board of Directors has transformed the organisation into an integral and visionary player in the philanthropic sector. Tracie works closely with members to promote strategic, effective philanthropy and support their journey towards impactful giving.

Over the past 3 years Tracie has spearheaded AJF Innovation, aiming to raise awareness and support addressing the big issues facing the Australian Jewish community, with a major focus on Jewish life for young adults in their 20’s and 30’s and Jewish continuity. She has been instrumental in bringing successful, innovative international programs to Australia, working together with international foundations and organizations to catalyse change for local Jewish communities.

Before joining the AJF Tracie worked with a variety of Jewish organisations and was responsible for a myriad of projects including fundraising, marketing, major events and conferences.

Through Tracie’s multifaceted experience and with her diverse network, she has developed a skillset which has led her to the position she is in today, working with others to create change and achieve success on a macro scale.
Andres Spokoiny
USA

The CEO of Federation CJA in Montreal from 2009–2011, he helped fundamentally change the Federation’s operations and its relationship with the community.

In Montreal, as a young, ‘out of the box’ Federation executive, he spearheaded a new branding strategy and initiated and developed innovative community programs that are now being used as models across North America.

Before joining the Federation, Andrés worked for the American Jewish Joint Distribution Community (JDC) in Paris. As Regional Director for Northeast Europe, he was responsible for a number of pan-European projects, leading programs in the areas of Welfare, Leadership Development, Jewish Renewal, Education, Community Development, and Outreach, and building coalitions with local and international organizations, public and private.
Sigal Yaniv Feller
Israel

Sigal Yaniv Feller was born in NY to Israeli parents, and moved to Israel at the age of 6. She graduated from the Sde Boker Environmental High School, which was a critical period in formulating her commitment to Israel’s social and environmental fields. She then served in the army as an SPNI Nature and Environment Educator for civilian and military groups in the Mt Hermon Field School. Sigal received her BSc in Biology and Environmental Science, and MSc in Environmental Science, from Hebrew University of Jerusalem. Her professional experience includes positions as Director of Field Projects for Young Judea’s Year Course and Director of YJ’s Student Leadership Program “Sharsheret.”

Between the years 2001-2011, Sigal served as the Executive Director of the Green Environment Fund (GEF), a unique philanthropic model of five foundations supporting the environment in Israel through a joint strategy. Over the course of these years, GEF was a significant player and leader in building the environmental movement in Israel.

In 2006, Sigal was chosen as one of the 10 most influential people on the environment in Israel by the “The Marker” Israeli magazine. In 2011, Sigal and her family moved to Hong Kong for three years as Israeli diplomats. During these years, Sigal was the Israeli representative of KH-UIA in Hong Kong and the Far East.

After her return, Sigal joined JFN-Jewish Funders Network, as director of advisory services in Israel, working with Jewish philanthropists from around the world with issues regarding their Israel giving.
Jewish Funders Network, for the past 25 years, headquartered in New York and also active in Israel, has worked to increase Jewish philanthropy’s impact. The JFN annual conference has built a reputation as a not-to-be missed event. Today, with more than 1,400 members internationally who represent billions of dollars of combined giving, JFN is the global table for Jewish philanthropy.

The Australian Jewish Funders (AJF) is a network of mindful funders who believe that greater impact can be achieved collectively. Driven by Jewish values, the AJF aims to provide a space to enhance and nurture strategic philanthropy, explore philanthropic best practice and encourage innovation amongst like-minded funders, inspiring members to have a greater impact on the Jewish community, wider Australian society and the world.

The Pratt Foundation
Established in Melbourne in 1978 by the late Richard Pratt and Jeanne Pratt AC, Pratt Philanthropies is one of the largest private sources of philanthropy in Australia. The Pratt Foundation’s mission statement is “To enrich the lives of our communities”. And it aims to pursue that goal, in the words of Jeremiah, in “a spirit of kindness, justice and equity”.

We wish to thank the Pratt Foundation for their support initiating and convening this conference.
The Jewish Business Forum (JBF) is a society dedicated to promoting the interests of our members in Singapore and the region by providing business information and networking opportunities. The Jewish Business Forum creates opportunities for this community through networking events, high-level meetings with international business leaders, and panel discussions with policy makers and influential voices from the region.

The Jewish Welfare Board (JWB), established in 1949, manages Singapore’s Jewish community affairs. The Jewish Welfare Board is a non-profit organisation which serves the needs of the Jewish community in Singapore and takes care of all the administration for the various departments.
