The Woodrow Wilson Dissertation Fellowships in Women’s Studies encourage original and significant research about women and gender that crosses disciplinary, regional, or cultural boundaries, including but not limited to intersectionality, feminist theory, and post-colonial studies.

Eligible proposals from applicants in the humanities and social sciences will have as a central focus the study of women and/or gender. Applicants must have all pre-dissertation requirements completed at the time of application, including approval of the dissertation proposal. Candidates should expect to complete their dissertation between March and August 2021.

Awards: 10 Fellowships of $5,000 for 12 months

Application deadline: October 15, 2019

Since the first Women’s Studies Fellows were named in 1974, over 500 emerging scholars have been funded, many now prominent in their fields. They are distinguished faculty members, artists and novelists, and (in some cases) leaders in business, government, and the nonprofit sector. They include a Pulitzer Prize winner, two MacArthur Fellows, seven Guggenheim Fellows, a number of Fulbright Fellows, and many others who have achieved significant distinctions. Notably, a number of the Fellows volunteer their time as reviewers to help select new Women’s Studies Fellows and enthusiastically support the next generation of scholars exploring women’s issues and matters of gender.

Meet a few of the 2019 Women’s Studies Fellows

Grace Zhou
Stanford University, anthropology
In the Market for Intimacy: Work and Welfare in Post-Soviet Central Asia

Lizbett Benge
Arizona State University, gender studies
Sensing the State and Strategizing Survival: Art, Ethnography, and the Lived Experiences of Foster Care Alumni

Michaela Kleber
College of William & Mary, history
Gendered Societies, Sexual Empires: Early French Colonization among the Illinois

Hannah Frydman
University of Arizona, history
Between the Lines: Sex, Work, and Business in the Parisian Classifieds, 1881–1940

To find out more and apply to the Fellowship: woodrow.org/womens-studies ws@woodrow.org