Khan fund battles luxury developers for first time

London Mayor Sadiq Khan has used a new £250m fund aimed at shielding plots from being developed for luxury homes for the first time. The land fund bought two thirds of the site used by St Ann’s Hospital in north London. Plans had been made to build 470 homes, 14pc of which would have been affordable, but the Mayor will now build 800, with half being affordable.
