Abigail Armstrong is a first year student studying finance and international business from Columbus, OH. In high school, Abigail was a very active student leader and athlete who worked part-time. To become acclimated to the university, she decided to maintain a high level of engagement, in order to build relationships and to stay true to her previous strategy for success. In addition to Business Fellows, Abigail hit the ground running as a Kolodzik Business Scholar, Delta Sigma Pi professional business fraternity, Lindner Women in Business and intramural sports. Abigail prepares to serve our country as a member of the Air Force ROTC.

Despite a busy schedule, Abigail takes the time to build meaningful relationships with her peers and is known for being dependable. In her first semester alone, Abigail made a very positive impression on the Business Fellows Leadership Team garnering her the reputation of a leader. Overall, Abigail strives to take advantage of the variety of opportunities the university and Cincinnati have to offer and to be relatable and trustworthy as a leader.
