President’s Message

I hope that each of you is enjoying a peaceful summer and getting some cherished moments of rest and relaxation.

To those of you who were able to attend the national conference in June, I hope you were energized by all of the events and that the myriad of messages, throughout all of the research presentations, left you with a renewed sense of the inspirational work that FCS professionals continue to do. I, again congratulate our own Mary Turner Gilliland, Bay District President, recipient of the Distinguished Service Award who was recognized at the conference for her many years of service to others and in furthering the mission of FCS.

When I think about the mission of FCS, I’m reminded of the pioneers who not only paved the way for bringing forth the roots of our mission, but who were courageous, caring, and driven by the urge to put the fundamental needs of each of us, our families, and the communities that we trust in, at the forefront of their lives. Just as they did, you do.

I think it can be easy for us to forget how valuable our efforts are when we find ourselves on auto-pilot and doing our best at doing what we do—without really thinking about the overall impact it makes on others in the deepest sense. The service you provide is, at some level, lifesaving, but even at the most fundamental, it is the provision of a hand up which offers others the ability to equip themselves with the tools and knowledge needed for success and to reap the benefits of doing so. We help promote voices, empowerment, and the will to move forward with confidence. I know that the gladness that comes from being able to build the strength to deal with situations in life is profound. I share these thoughts with you as a way to say thank you for all that you do.

As summer will soon begin to wind down and the work at hand will begin to build up, I hope that you will carry these thoughts and know that what you do for others, is the heart of the mission of CA-AFCS.

I wish to take this opportunity to thank Dr. Jody Roubanis, Dolores Robles, Sarah Degre, Kappa Omicron Nu leadership, and all the volunteers who made the student unit conference at CSU Long Beach a huge success. When I entered the auditorium, I was overwhelmed at the site of a sea of students who were all of part of this great event, and it remains with me.

I also take this opportunity to thank Dr. Nanci Schindler who is working diligently on bringing CAAFCS a new website platform. This new site will have a fresh, clean and updated appearance and will assist our members in many ways. Please watch for this great change!

I thank tri-chairs Dr. Nancy Rabolt and Rhonda Campbell for planning our upcoming 2018 Biennial Conference in San Francisco. This promises to be an event that is sure to bring great ideas, research, proposals and ongoing work in the industry to all of our attendees. Please watch for the call for research and proposals coming soon.

Finally, I would like to take this opportunity to welcome our new Board of Directors members and thank them for their service: Adina Duggan (Treasurer), Jenne Hill (EEF Committee Member), and Cynthia Schlesinger (Nominating Committee).

Please enjoy our summer issue of Contempo and, as always, I look forward to hearing about your successes along with ideas for the future of CA AFCS.

Gus Vouchilas Ed.D.

In Memorium

It is with a very sad heart that I write to you today about the passing of our dear colleague, friend, and CA AFCS member, Bonnie Farmer. In the time that I got to know Bonnie, I saw her passion for life, for what we do as an organization, and an insatiable urge to keep learning and doing good. She will so greatly missed. I cherish all that she has done.

A Celebration of Life took place for her on August 5th. Flowers will be sent on behalf of our state. If you wish to make a personal donation in Bonnie’s memory, I was advised of this option: Education Academy at John W. North High School in Riverside, CA. The program supports at risk students to reach their advancement goals in education. You may all know of other options that were also close to her heart. May her memory be eternal! —Gus Vouchilas

After 78 beautiful years of life, Dr. Bonnita May Farmer passed with her family by her side. We know she will be greatly missed by the community. Dr. Farmer, also known as Bonnie, Mom, and Grandma, led a courageous crusade for education and family welfare. She was born May 26 in Bloomington, Indiana, where she also met her husband of 55 years, Walter Farmer. Having earned a BA from Indiana University and MA from the University of Illinois, she went on to teach nutrition, recipe development, family finance, and textile chemistry at multiple colleges. She returned to school to complete her PhD and became a full professor at Cal Poly Pomona. Her students thrived under her care and compassion for expanding learning opportunities.

She is survived by her husband, Walter, two daughters, Margaret Kenrick and Melissa Coste, and four amazing grandchildren, Samantha Kaufhold, Anthony Kenrick, Katelyn Coste, and Nathan Coste. They cherished their time with her cooking, sewing, and traveling. Her passion and determination to meet every challenge presented to her will continue to be an inspiration to her family and friends.

In lieu of flowers, her family suggest donations be sent to the charities Dr. Farmer supported in her lifetime, such as the American Heart Association.
2018 Biennial Conference Announcement

Save the date!

2018 CA-AFCS Western Region Biennial Conference:

Mark your calendar for April 6-7, 2018 to attend the CA-AFCS Western Region Biennial Conference, to be held at the beautiful Hilton San Francisco Airport Bayfront Hotel. The Hilton offers free shuttle service from the nearby San Francisco International Airport. We are gearing up for maximum capacity participation from faculty, students, and industry professionals from Northern and Southern California and neighboring states. The call for proposals to present a workshop, presentation, and/or a poster on innovative teaching or research related to families, nutrition, apparel, interiors, consumers, or any aspect of the consumer and family sciences field will begin soon! Be on the lookout for more information as this is a conference you will not want to miss. In the meantime if you have ANY questions or suggestions, please contact Dr. Nancy Rabolt (CA-AFCS VP of Programs) at nrabolt@sfsu.edu.

What a special time we had representing the California constituents this summer at the 108th AAFCS Annual Conference in Dallas! Dr. Jody Roubanis and I attended the Leadership Council sessions to learn where things are continuing to go for our organization. There was time to connect with old friends, see sites, and celebrate the accomplishments of one of our own…Mary Turner Guilliland. The overall theme for sessions this year was financial in nature. There was a wide variety of sessions to choose from, addressing financial fitness from almost every angle in our discipline. I know Jody was involved in multiple presentations this year. Also, it was so good to see Kay Wilder back in step with AAFCS Leadership. Though we miss her greatly, we wish her well as she joins in AAFCS Board activities from her east coast location.

Nearly 600 family and consumer sciences and related professionals gathered in Dallas to share leading-edge research, strategies, and tools related to "Financial Fitness: Trends, Innovations & Impacts" and other important topics for the field. Thank you to everyone who attended and contributed to making this a fabulous learning and networking event!

We are adding resources to the educational sessions, i3 rountable presentations, and community events pages (www.aaafcs.org/meetings/17/). Please continue to check back as more will be added. You can also read the prepared remarks from our Capstone Luncheon Keynote Speaker, CFPB Director Richard Cordray!
Representing LA District at the 108th Annual Conference, we (Doris Barela-Fossen and Diane Lewis-Goldstein) started out by SAYING YES TO FCS; not only by attending the first session on that topic Sunday evening after the reception, but also by helping two students (Sara Digre and Katherine Garcia) attend the national conference. Seeing the value in FCS is an important aspect of our field, sharing it with younger people is paramount if we want our field to continue its meaningful role in society.

Additionally, on behalf of our CSUN FCS Student Association, Sara, our student president, delivered 1300 hand-made cards to the AAFCS National Student Unit for kids who are hospitalized all across the US. For perspective, that is one entire carry-on suitcase filled with cards. Last year Sara delivered over 100 cards, but she came away from her first AAFCS conference in Washington with a bigger goal–1000 cards–and she made it! She was exited and engaged and got many others to help.

Attending a conference can change one’s perception, much as Sara Newcomb spoke about at the opening session about changing one’s perception about financial planning and risk; and it can get us engaged, as Richard Cordray reminded us that we must continue to help many more people who need help to reach financial fitness (see https://www.consumerfinance.gov/). Changing our perceptions, getting excited and engaged and SAYING YES TO FCS is vital and well worth it!

When not in sessions, we explored a bit of Dallas; the arboretum, local restaurants, museums, and going up the Reunion tower.

It was great fun catching up with our new friends from the Washington Affiliate! We really appreciate their interest and involvement in our work. We look forward to partnering with them more as they strive to expand and strengthen their programs with the same passion as we have.

During the 2017 AAFCS Annual Conference in Dallas three sessions were held to address the FCS educator shortages in secondary, post-secondary and Extension settings. As part of the Family & Consumer Sciences Educator Pipeline campaign, FCS professionals from all practice settings met to identify targeted areas for potential growth and implementation. Small work groups were formed to develop action plans for the 2017-2018 year on the following:

- Educating and Leveraging Support through Stakeholders
- Impacting Legislation/National Policy
- Making a Difference – Recruitment Efforts
- Utilizing/Strengthening Social Media
- Promoting and Advancing Research Efforts and Initiatives
- Social media to advance Say Yes to FCS
- Reaching all professionals
- Branding of FCS

For this participant, the sessions were insightful and helped me realize just how much has changed in how FCS professionals navigate through the influence of social media. All FCS professionals can help promote the field through social media and citizen journalism. Look me up on Twitter for some recent examples, my handle is @MoreFCS.

Highlights from session one are at https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IBRQbA8pYxU. For more resources about the Say Yes to FCS campaign go to http://www.aafcs.org/FCSEdPipeline.asp or contact AAFCS.

Dr. Nanci Schindler had the opportunity to report on some curriculum development she undertook while assisting a local San Diego non-government organization (NGO) that serves to help survivors of human trafficking (HTS). As a community member, Nanci volunteered services to help women choosing to leave the life of human trafficking gain financial literacy. The NGO offered HTS transitional housing and educational opportunities (such as financial literacy training) in hopes of enabling them to rebuild their lives and gain independent re-entry into the societal mainstream. One thing was realized very quickly. Survivors are not always ready for traditional methods of financial training until aspects of trauma are dealt with and minimized. Within the transitional housing situation, however, financial life skills could be much more subtly developed. Nanci used her training and past experience with Home Management Theory and elements of the Home Management Residence experience, now defunct within most FCS programs, to recommend a change in teaching/learning strategy. Her proposal was accepted and she developed curriculum that would suit the NGO she was working with.

In her presentation, “Outside the Box: Using Home Management Residence Curriculum Within Transitional Housing Programs to Build Capacity for Financial Resource Management”, Nanci relayed that the purpose of the curriculum was to help human trafficking survivors learn or regain basic life skills (household and financial management skills) through five separate but interdependent roles. Each participant would have an opportunity to fulfill each role, and related responsibilities, similar to what FCS college students used to experience in a Home Management Residence experience. However, instead of being a practicum or application of past training, the experience in the HTS transitional housing situation would be a catalyst for new learning where skills were never gained or simply corrupted due to enslavement. An added benefit would be that financial resource management skills would be practiced within the context and experience of building healthy rather than enslaving type relationships.

All my love and thanks to CA-AFCS for your support in the DSA process. It's because of Bay District and CHEA (as it was in those days) that I have felt called to volunteer at the District, State, National, and International levels in FCS/Home Economics. I hope to see a lot of you in Dallas (my very first AHEA annual meeting was in Dallas, in 1980. .hotter than blazes: 114 F., and the asphalt streets melted!) to thank you personally.

2017 Leadership and Management Conference

32nd Family and Consumer Sciences (FCS) Education Conference

Ninety-five teachers, four staff members, and three administrators attended the 32nd Annual Family and Consumer Sciences Leadership and Management Conference held June 28-30, in Olympic Valley, California. The theme of the 2017 conference, “Empowering FCS Superheroes”, was designed to provide new information, top-notch presenters, sessions on cutting edge strategies, and great opportunities to share new ideas and resources. FCS educators, administrators, counselors, and business and industry representatives attended from all across the state.

Harriet Turk, an inspiring professional speaker opened the conference with a motivational presentation. Dawn Maceyka, President of the Home Economics Teachers Association of California announced the Outstanding HECT Teacher for 2017. HECT teachers, Raean Gaddoni, Argonaut High School in Stockton, and Lynnelle Hite from Calexico High School in Calexico were honored with the Kathryn Whitten Memorial Professional Development Scholarships. Valerie Backus, CTE Liaison, Great Oaks High School, Temecula Valley Unified School District, Arron Black, Assistant Principal, San Luis Obispo High School and Richard Schmidig, Principal, Linden High School were honored as Outstanding Administrators. Meaningful and timely curriculum and strategies for teaching were featured in breakout sessions.

The Home Economics Department at Eisenhower High School, Rialto Unified School District was honored as a Program of Excellence.

Peter Martinovich, Educational Consultant with Goodheart-Willcox Publishing recognized as the 2017 Business and Industry Friend of FCS.

Marco Sullivan, World Cup Race Skier, sent the participants home inspired and refreshed after his closing keynote speech, “Superhero in Action.”

The Home Economics Teachers Association of California sponsored a Curriculum Roundtable focusing on sharing best practices and strategies for teaching.

Teachers and administrators will return to their campuses in the fall ready to meet the challenges and demands of high expectations and emphasize student academic achievement.
Going on vacation?
Protect your money before you go.

Besides packing and securing their homes before traveling, smart travelers also take steps to protect their financial accounts and information while vacationing. Experts recommend these 6 steps.

Secure your mobile device(s).
The Identity Theft Resource Center, suggests that everyone--traveling or not---should take some simple steps to protect personal and financial information stored on their smartphone or tablet. Follow manufacturer instructions to set up passcode (or password) protection on your device, so if it is lost or stolen no one can access information stored on the device to use your credit or drain your bank accounts. For the highest level of protection install antivirus software on your mobile devices, and regularly update the operating systems.

Make copies of important financial information.
Make two copies of credit and bank (ATM) cards you’ll be using on your trip, as well as travel documents, and your itinerary. Copy the fronts and backs of cards so you’ll have the customer service number, expiration date, and security code for each as well as the card number. Leave a copy of the information with a friend or family member and bring the other copy with you. When you arrive at your destination store paper copies in the hotel safe. Alternatively make digital copies of the documents and keep them in cloud-based storage so you can access them remotely if necessary.

Tell your bank or credit card company about your travel plans.
It’s inconvenient to have your credit card charges declined when traveling. That sometimes happens because financial companies have fraud-monitoring systems that may mistake unusual activity, such as using your card in a different location, as fraud. Alert your bank and/or credit card company about your travel plans so they know you are using the cards and won’t decline or block charges made on your trip. You can notify the companies through online banking apps or by phone.

Take an extra credit card, preferably from another financial company.
This is a backup to keep your vacation on track if your primary credit card gets lost or stolen because it could take several days for a replacement card to arrive. When you get to your destination, keep the extra card in the hotel safe unless you need it. Report a lost or stolen card immediately to limit your liability. (If you made copies or photos of the back of your primary credit card, you’ll have the telephone number to call to report the loss.)

Clean out your wallet and purse before you go.
Only take credit cards that you plan to use on the trip. Leave others at home in a secure location. Remove any cards with your Social Security Number. If your health insurance card includes your Social Security number, make a copy of the card and remove the last four numbers. Leave the original at home. Memorize your passwords and don’t carry your PIN number. (This is never a good idea even at home.)

Don’t store sensitive information on your mobile device.
Many of us use a smartphone or tablet to bank, shop, pay bills, send and receive email, and maintain social media contacts. Before going on vacation delete account user names, passwords, and security question answers for these applications, or password protect the information using a different password for each application.

CSULB Kappa Omicron Nu Hosts 2017 CA-AFCS Student Leadership & Research Conference

By Jody Roubanis, CFCS

In partnership with the California State University Long Beach (CSULB) Kappa Omicron Nu (KON) chapter, CA-AFCS held it’s second biennial Student Leadership and Research Conference on April 29, 2017 at the CSULB Student Union. Over 200 students and professionals attended the conference, themed “Reaching your Leadership Potential through Ethics of Care”. To determine the conference theme and program, Dr. Jody Roubanis worked with CSULB KON leaders and CA-AFCS Student Unit chair Sara Digre. Like the 2015 student conference at California State University Northridge (CSUN), the family & consumer sciences body of knowledge (FCS-BOK) was a big part of the program and video clips from Ted Talks were used to bring practical application of the FCS-BOK to challenges and issues relevant to the FCS profession today. See link for more specifics on how the FCS-BOK was used to determine the program.

There were 18 student groups and individual researchers who presented research or service projects. Both FCS honor societies were represented in the service projects, Phi Upsilon Omicron and Kappa Omicron Nu. Four schools were represented in the research projects, CSULB, Point Loma Nazarene University (PLNU), San Francisco State University and CSUN. See link for conference program and poster presentation titles. Behind the scenes, Dolores Robles was responsible for registration at CSULB and Dr. Diane Lewis Goldstein for CSUN registration. EEF grant recipient (and current CA-AFCS president) Dr. Gus Vouchilas tapped into his resources to bring geographical diversity to the conference’s afternoon leadership panel. CSULB KON advisor Dr. Richard Tuveson ensured excellent communication between organizations. CSULB student Jared Gabaldon provided facilities planning and the technical support during the conference. CSULB KON student Anne Esperanzate served as the volunteer coordinator.

During the planning phase of the conference, CSULB faculty Dolores Robles encouraged keeping the student registration fee at $10.00 to ensure high student turnout. Approximately 80% of the students who did attend the conference were from CSULB. Students who attended the conference from PLNU and CSUN were sponsored by their FCS departments. To keep the student registration to the cost of the lunch, CSULB KON generously paid for all printing and the facilities fees. Additional support for the conference came from the two exhibitors (HETAC and Cooperative Extension) and sponsors (Rene Ketchum of WAFCS, Crystal Aurelio, Emily Burdick, Dolores Robles, Noemi Rodriguez, Dr. Richard Tuveson and Dr. Diane Lewis Goldstein).

At the end of the conference during the open mike portion, CSULB fashion design student Mimi Lee said that she will always remember her experience at the conference because of how her peers listened to her ideas for a toilet paper dress design competition. For social media posts about the conference use #FCScare and for a video of the conference highlights go to https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2UieBiDy260&feature=youtu.be

Undergraduate and graduate students from California universities and colleges presented posters.

Leadership Panel members shared how they apply an ethic of care to their work.

Dr. Jody Roubanis discusses the FCS Ethic of Care with students.

2017 CA-AFCS Scholarship Recipients

Congratulations to all the recipients of the CA-AFCS scholarships. Funds come from the CA-AFCS Extended Education Fund. Thanks to all the 28 students who applied. And thanks to the Scholarship Committee (Nancy Rabolt, Gus Vouchilas, and Nancy Wolford) who had a hard job choosing our recipients from an excellent applicant pool. Faculty should encourage eligible students to apply again next year.

All scholarships were for $1500 in addition to a year membership in AAFCS
