The percentage of Canadians who give to charity has been declining for years, and many relatively wealthy individuals do not donate. Philanthropy in the US seems to be in a better state, and Americans give at higher rates than Canadians. The differences are not due solely to differences in tax incentives.

What can we learn from the way that philanthropy works in the States? Why and how Canadians could do better?

A discussion with:

Mike Pedersen, Chair, Business Development Bank of Canada; former President and CEO, TD Bank, US; Driving force behind The Personal Philanthropy Project at Imagine Canada

Patrick Rooney, Executive Associate Dean; Professor of Economics and Philanthropic Studies; Lilly Family School of Philanthropy, IUPUI, Indianapolis, USA

Moderated by Dr. Alastair Summerlee, Past President, Carleton University & University of Guelph

April 2, 2019  5:00–6:30 pm

2nd Floor Conference Room, Richcraft Hall, Carleton University
1125 Colonel By Drive, Ottawa

Please RSVP: carleton.ca/mpnl