AB 376 (Stone)
Student Borrower Bill of Rights

SUMMARY
This bill establishes the Student Borrower Bill of Rights which will ensure that student borrowers are given reliable information, quality customer service, and meaningful access to repayment and forgiveness programs.

AB 376 also establishes the Student Borrower Advocate position in order to provide timely assistance to any student loan borrower facing issues with their loan.

EXISTING LAW
In 2016, California enacted the Student Loan Servicing Act with AB 2251 (Stone). This bill created a regulatory licensure program within the Department of Business Oversight (DBO) and gave DBO the ability to oversee companies that service student loans in California. The program currently helps ensure that student loan borrowers in the state are treated fairly.

NEED FOR THIS BILL
The original bill, AB 2251, was first introduced to complement increased servicing standards that were set to be enacted by the federal government in 2016. However, since then, Secretary of Education Betsy DeVos cancelled plans to increase servicing standards and consumer protections and former Consumer Financial Protection Bureau director Mick Mulvaney closed the office investigating student loan abuses and fraud. It is very clear that the federal government is no longer fulfilling their obligation to protect student loan borrowers.

Although AB 2251 created some protections for borrowers, it did not offer the kind of comprehensive, transparent, and enforceable standards that are used in other regulated financial markets. With 3,780,000 student loan borrowers across California owing $134.3 billion, it is imperative that California takes a strong stance to protect borrowers against bad actors.

SOLUTION

• End abusive practices by the student loan industry. Companies should never be able to take advantage of borrowers who come to them asking for help. AB 376 prohibits abusive practices and gives borrowers new tools to take action if they are victims of industry abuse.

• Create new “rules of the road” for student loan companies. Borrowers deserve the same rights as homeowners with mortgages and consumers with credit card debt. AB 376 will require companies to handle student loan payments in borrowers’ best interests while also ensuring that servicers give accurate information is given to borrowers asking for help. Additionally, the bill will protect borrowers from fees and credit damage due to mistakes made by loan servicing companies.

• Create special protections for vulnerable populations. The most vulnerable borrowers often have special rights under federal law and in loan contracts, but consumer complaints and government enforcement actions show that industry routinely violates the rights of these borrowers. AB 376 requires student loan companies to train their staff to understand these rights and creates strong new protections to prevent companies from misleading military borrowers, deceiving teachers and public service workers, cheating borrowers with disabilities, and defrauding older Americans.

• Create a new Student Borrower Advocate in California. For too long, borrowers have depended on officials in Washington to handle complaints about loan companies and often run out of options when federal agencies fail to act. AB 376 creates a new Student Borrower Advocate in California to help individuals who run into trouble, and to serve as a voice for California student borrowers in Sacramento and in Washington.

• Demand transparency from the student loan industry. Lawmakers and the public lack basic information about how much student debt exists, what types of borrowers are most likely to struggle with repayment, and what industry practices are harming California consumers. AB 376 will shine a light on the student loan industry, tasking the Department of Business Oversight with creating a new “student loan industry report card” to measure the relative effectiveness of different companies at preventing loan defaults, enrolling borrowers in affordable payment options, and meeting borrowers’ needs.
