Biki ridership holds steady

By Nans Wu  Honolulu Star-Advertiser

Bikeshare Honolulu says ridership is robust in the second year of the program.

Bikeshare Honolulu project manager Kevin M. Cho said 3,700 rides were registered on Oct. 6, with 10,327 riders in October, November and December compared to 10,032 riders in July, August and September.

"We're glad to see that many citizens are using this system," Cho said. "We hope to continue with this kind of growth." The citywide bike share program launched on Sept. 15, 2016.

Nimmer said, "Don't just talk to (federal) auditors, do something. Don't just talk to the businesses. Add some muscle, and don't be soft. Help people to make better decisions. And it's important for federal resources.

"We need to find ways to do this. We're working on a new program for the Bureau of Enviromental Protection to help businesses," Nimmer said. "We're working on a new program to help businesses.

"We're working on a new program to help businesses, we're working on a new program to help businesses, we're working on a new program to help businesses."
