The course introduces students to the historical, literary, and archaeological study of Hebrew scripture and the New Testament and is open to students with little or no background in biblical literature as well as to those who have some familiarity with the Tanakh ("Old Testament"), the New Testament, or both. Three credits.