Call for Papers

This special issue of Conatus - Journal of Philosophy seeks original contributions on the theme of the intersection of Holocaust Studies and Bioethics. The issue will examine this intersection from several vantage points, including but not limited to the following:

1. The History of (German) Medical Ethics – Before, During, and After the Holocaust
2. How Lessons of The Holocaust Influence Contemporary Views of The Physician’s Role vis-à-vis Patients vs. Population Health
3. How the Holocaust is an example of the Role of (Heath) Professions in Curbing/Supporting State Violence
5. Genetics Before, During, and After the Holocaust – Race Theory to Genetic Engineering
6. Lessons of the Holocaust for the Future of Medicine

Potential submitters are asked to address one of these six themes, though related themes may also be considered.

Abstracts for articles should be 300-500 words in length, include a working title and 5 to 10 keywords. Abstracts are due by April 30, 2019. By May 15, 2019, authors will receive notification that a full article will be invited or declined. Full articles will be due by August 30, 2019.

Footnotes and literature cited should be according to the Chicago Manual of Style / Notes and Bibliography standard. See sample paper: https://ejournals.epublishing.ekt.gr/index.php/Conatus/article/view/19372.

Please email submissions to Stacy Gallin (s gallin@mimeh.org) with the subject heading “Bioethics and the Holocaust submission.” Inquiries may also be directed to s gallin@mimeh.org.
