Bahrain Al-Youm received information from Jau Prison concerning the deteriorating health of two of the detainees who were sentenced to death.

On 1 February 2016, the sources stated that both Mohammed Ramadan Isa and Salman Isa are suffering from serious health issues and are not being provided with adequate medical care.

Mohammed Ramadan suffers from severe back pain, which has worsened during the winter. While Salman Isa also suffers from severe pain in his leg, which had been injured with shotgun pellets.

Prison administration refuses to provide them with adequate medical care and scarcely takes them to the prison clinic, where they’re only given painkillers and not provided with full medical treatment.

Bahraini authorities sentenced Mohammed Ramadan and Salman Isa to death after accusing them of terrorism, which is a common accusation used by the authorities against activists and political dissents.

Many human rights organizations confirmed the Bahraini authorities’ misuse of the Anti-Terrorism Law to prosecute opposition.

Deprivation of medical care is a serious violation of international human rights conventions, to which Bahrain is a party.
