Family members of detainee Sayed Sadeq Taher have expressed their concern over his health, saying that the Jaw prison administration has prevented him from taking his medication for over four months.

The family stated,"Sayed Sadeq has been detained for three and a half years. He has epilepsy and has not been given his medicine for more than four months for no reason. We visited him at Jaw prison three days ago. His health is deteriorating because he suffers from so many seizures. He confirmed that he hasn’t received his medication despite his constant requests."

Sayed’s wife added, "my husband was deprived of treatment when he was first arrested. After non-stop requests, he was seen by a doctor who prescribed him medication. However, he hasn’t been given his medicine for the last four months."

The family reiterated their concern over their son's wellbeing and stressed that epilepsy is a serious illness. The patient needs special care, not detention and neglect, especially since Sayed Sadeq's health is deteriorating continuously.
